STREET WIDENING FUNDS PROVIDED

According to the state highway budget for 1933-35, released for publication last Friday, San Mateo county has been allotted $773,000 for federal-state highway work during the biennium.

San Mateo county's allotment is divided into five projects, all of which are most necessary improvements to the highways in this section and for which this county has long been agitating. Two of these included in this budget were drawn to the personal attention of the Governor and received assurances from him that they would be laid before the State Highway Commission for consideration

One is the grading and paving of portions of Junipero Serra Boulevard at an estimated cost of $300,000. The other is the elimination of the Mission street bottleneck between Daly City and Colma. The road will be widened and paved at a cost of $300,000.

According to reports coming from San Francisco, an estimated $50,000 is necessary to complete purchase of rights-of-way in Daly City before state work can start in widening Mission street. Supervisor Andrew Gallagher, vice-president of the joint highway committee, is quoted as announcing last Wednesday that this sum will be procured in time to push work ahead on the projetc this year.

Rights-of-way in San Francisco county have already been secured, it is announced, and the only difficulty now facing highway authorities is an agreement with Daly City property owners on definition of permanent property lines.

The road from Skyline boulevard to Half Moon Bay will be improved by grading and surfacing for which $73,000 has been voted.

Portions of the highway from Sharp's Park to San Francisco will be graded for $100,000, welcome news to autoists.

Excluded from the $59,000,000 outlay is the widening of the Bayshore highway underpass at South San Francisco, a project originally included. This fact brought immediate protest from the South San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, which telegraphed Earl Lee Kelly, chairman of the Board of Public Works, Tuesday afternoon.

More than $10,000,000 worth of work will begin in October, and additional projects will be launched thereafter as fast as possible. This policy to speed up work was announced by Earl Lee Kelly, Director of the Department of Public Works.

Reception for Parents of Newly Enrolled Students

Approximately 75 parents and teachers attended the P. T. A. meeting held Tuesday night in the Little Theatre of Jefferson Union high school. The meeting was planned as a reception to the parents of new students and was a great success. Those who attended displayed much enthusiasm upon being led on an inspection tour of the new building.

Following the usual opening procedure, presided over by Mrs. Bentley, president, new by-laws were presented and accepted with little change. The two prime objectives of the P. T. A. for the ensuing term were explained by Mrs. Bentley. Stress is to be laid upon the importance of a complete understanding by the parents of students as to the aims of the teachers in school work. They should be well-informed enough to be able to give every possible aid at home to the intellectual and moral development of their children.

The school P. T. A. had the honor of having Mrs. Garland, president of the Seventeenth District of the California P. T. A., present at its first meeting. She gave an interesting talk, brief and to the point, urging the sincerest co-operation between parents and teachers. She also praised this unit for their high purposes and methods of fulfilling them.

Mr. Bentley, president of the Board of Trustees, and Mr. Ferguson, principal, also gave short talks concerning various features of the new building. Mr. Paterson, instructor, who came to the high school last term, explained to the assemblage of mothers and fathers the nature and benefits of the subject, "Vocational Guidance." He has been very successful in giving aid to younger students in selecting careers.

After the adjournment of the meeting, the visitors were given the opportunity of inspecting the new addition. Their remarks were most gratifying to the school authorities who have put so much work into the construction of a much-needed addition.

FAVORS UNIFIED LEGISLATIVE PLAN

In answer to an increasing clamor among ex-service men for the close co-operation of all service organizations in the support of a unified legislative program, Commander L. W. Johnston of Post No. 2044, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S., has received word from national headquarters that his organization is prepared to act in this direction.

"It should be known that the V. F. W. has always advocated coordination and unity of action among veteran groups," declares Commander Johnston. "Ever since the World war we have made repeated efforts to enlist the co-operation of all veteran groups under the leadership of a combined council that could speak for the mass of veterans as a whole.

"Because the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States includes in its membership veterans from all wars and campaigns in the history of the country, we are again taking the lead in a movement to unify veteran legislation and veteran activities. Immediately following the National Encampment to be held August 27 to September 1, in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, our organization will invite all other veteran organizations and groups to participate in the formation of a combined council on legislative policies. By coordination of our efforts, we can prevail upon the next session of Congress to take such steps as necessary to secure justice and equity for the service connected disabled veteran and his dependents."

The dance held Saturday night, August 19, was a success in every measure. These dances are geting more popular all the time, and we hope that before long it will be necessary to have a larger hall.

The degree team of the Ladies Auxilliary is progressing in mighty fine shape, and are getting more and more proficient under the able leadership of comrade Fred. A. Collins, drill master.

The next important meting of the Post will be held on Saturday night August 26, in the Masonic Hall. This meeting will be open to the public and all members, friends and acquaintances are cordially invited to attend this meeting. It is labeled "Citation Night." There are three comrades from Daly City and one from San Bruno who will be decorated with the Purple Heart, the insignia designed to show that the wearer suffered battle injuries. Immediately following the short dedication ceremonies, dancing will follow until midnight. A good orchestra will be on hand to furnish the music. Be sure and attend this meeting.

The N. R. A. is being felt, the good is being spread among the needy. Employment is on the up-grade, and it is the duty of every real thinking American to get behind this movement and see that this is one plan that WORKS. Remember, it is for your good that it does work. Put your shoulder to the wheel, boost for the N. R. A., and patronize only those displaying the Blue Eagle.

FRED R. LINSER, Adjutant.

LEGION COUNCIL TO MEET IN DALY CITY

The San Mateo Counyt Council, American Legion, will meet in Daly City next Friday, September 1. The Council meetings are open meetings and all Legionnaires of Daly City are urged to attend.

Don't forget Social night, Saturday, August 26, at Legion Hall, 474 San Diego avenue. Comrade Cornell as "master of ceremonies" promises a good time. "Doc" and his Haywire orchestra will be there.

Daly City Post and Unit will hold a joint whist Tuesday, August 29, at 8:30 P. M., in Legion Hall.

Comrade Cornell, chairman of the Daly City Renovize Committee, reports many pledges coming in. The San Mateo County Committee can depend on Daly City doing its share.

The present time is a particularly advantageous one. Property owners can get needed work done at a great saving in cost, because the cost of materials used are now on the average 40 per cent cheaper than they have been since the war. Prices have already strated to rise, and if construction work is delayed too long the property owner will lose advantage of present low price levels. Every dollar put in to the regular channels of trade by property owners spending money on their property will be multiplied in the course of the year twenty-five or thirty times in purchasing power for the business community. Workmen hitherto unemployed will be able to buy goods from the retail merchants, wholesalers and manufacturers, and in turn put others back to work.

In sponsoring this campaign Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, will maintain at all times a strictly impartial attitude and favor no one firm or individual. We urge you to deal with the local contracting firms with which you are familiar or to consult the classified telephone directory or newspapers. Call in your local painter, carpenter or other mechanics. Do it locally; buy your materials locally.

The Flood Will Trial Set for November 15

Superior Judge William F. James, San Jose, sitting in Redwood City, last Monday, set November 15 as the date for the new trial of the James L. Flood will battle. At the request of attorneys for Mrs. Constance May Gavin the trial again will be before a jury.

Mrs. Gavin seeks to secure a daughter's share of the late Menlo Park millionaire's vast estate. In the first trial former Superior Judge George H. Buck directed the verdict in favor of the Floods. Judge Buck's action was set aside by the state supreme court, which ordered the new trial.

GASOLINE TAX INCREASE

For the first time in more than a year the California gasoline tax last month was greater than for the same month in preceding years, according to Fred E. Stewart, member of the State Board of Equalization. A total tax of $3,320,232 was asssessed in July against gasoline distributors, Stewart said, representing a taxable gallonage of 111,792,332. In July of 1932, the tax collected was $3,093,956. The increase in July of this year over last was 7.3 per cent.

GRUBSTAKING HAS LOST INFLUENCE

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work.

Some good and some bad ideas are being advanced in the present high tension in the mining industry. Liberalization of the embargo on the shipment of gold out of the United States met with instant approval from the men of the mines. The next step should be the establishment of trading posts by the Federal government at strategic points in the Northwest and in Alaska, as well as in California.

President Roosevelt undoubtedly will not listen to suggestions that carry with them any lowering of the standard of independence of character of which Americans are justly proud. We are thinking of proposed grubstaking on a wholesale scale, that has found favor in certain quarters. Grubstaking, either public or private, is a bad thing, unqualifiedly a bad thing.

We have spoken heretofore of the necessity of the establishment of trading posts, but the plan is of such importance its discussion well merits reiteration. Persistencce in a good cause can never be harshly criticized. Even a bit of exaggeration, as Lord Macaulay pointed out long ago, is allowable in putting a cherished idea over.

Trading posts could be established in a short time and at comparatively small cost to the Government. Once the posts were functioning all talk of grubstaking would disappear, as there would be no basis for the lingual outpourings.

Credit would be given at the trading posts to the doughty prospector going out to the creeks, but as soon as a return, perhaps a small one at first, had come from his panning, the account for the supplies and food could be wiped out and he would be on his own from that time on. No sapping of character in that process. Grubstaking by the government, on the other hand, would tend to make a nation of dependents, something we should guard against at any cost.

Discoveries would be encouraged in the way of prizes, awards and bonuses. The miner making the original discovery in a district would be permitted to make more stakings than the late comers. That is as it should be. Encouragement of pioneering should ever be in the mind of well wishers of mining.

Funds for the establishment of trading posts are available and probably before long a "live wire" of Congress will initiate legislation to set the machinery going for the release of the necessaray capital. It may even be that the assembling of the national law making body will not be waited for, but the executive branch of the government will proceed, under the authority of present laws, in the great work of assisting the mining industry by the establishment of trading posts.

ONE KILLED, NINETEEN HURT IN WEEK END ACCIDENTS

Last week end accidents on San Mateo county highways resulted in one death and nineteen persons injured. The dead man is Benjamin Oben, 23, of San Francisco, a motor cyclist, who died from injuries incurred when his bicycle struck the rear end of a truck near San Bruno, Sunday morning.

This brings the total of deaths from San Mateo county traffic accidents to thirty-two since January 1, 1933.

DEATH OF LOCAL RESIDENT

Arthur Pringle, of Whittier street, passed away in San Francisco hospital after an illness of three months. He is survived by a son, Arthur Pringle, Jr., and a brother and sister, Alexander Pringle and Mrs. C. Nichaelson, of New York city.

Mr. Pringle was a member of the Chauffeurs' Union No. 625. The funeral was conducted from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co. last Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Inurnment was in Cypress Lawn Memorial Park.

INDUSTRIAL EMPLOYMENT INCREASES IN CALIFORNIA

Wage earners employed in California manufacturing establishments averaged 201,000 during the month of July, 1933, an increase of 41,200, or 25.4 per cent, since March of this year, according to estimates by the State Chamber of Commerce.

Fatally injured in the cave-in of a ditch, Joseph D. Castro, 52, South San Francisco laborer and father of five children, died early Friday at the South San Francisco hospital.

PUTS BAN ON TAX FOR RELIEF WORK

The members of the board of supervisors of San Mateo county last Saturday went on record as opposed to raising funds for work relief supervision and supplies by taxation this year.

Discussion of the new county budget centered on County Engineer James S. James' $245,000 road department setup for 1933-34. James reiterated his previous statement that if the entire $500,000 relief funds expected from federal and state sources are to be used for "relief work," it will require approximately $125,000 for supervision and other costs. Of this James said he had provided $70,000 in his revised road budget. Upward of $50,000 in addition must be raised by the board if it wants to carry work relief through to the end of the year, he said. Otherwise the county must turn from work to food relief when his budget is exhausted.

As it stood, the road department budget will be financed by gas tax revenue. It is based on anticipated gas tax income this year of $190,000, plus a $55,000 reserve which Controller Ed. Stack declares is available.

Supervisor Rosalie M. Brown of San Mateo led the board demand that all costs under the heading of roads this year must come out of the gas tax fund.

The engineer said the $70,000 he had designated for work relief supervision, etc., would work up approximately $105,000 worth of road projects for unskilled, unemployed labor. He said the county must provide two-thirds of the work relief program if the anticipated $500,000 from outside sources is to be used strictly for that purpose.

DRIVE TO SAVE LIVES BY EXERCISE OF CARE

Last year throughout the United States 29,000 persons were killed and more than 900,000 were injured in automobile accidents which occurred in practically every community in our country.

Since it is common knowledge that this record of casualities is largely due to the misuse of the streets and highways by too many drivers and pedestrians, the month of September has been set aside by many states as a period in which to demonstrate just how many lives and limbs may be saved by the exercise of more care and consideration on the part of drivers and pedestrians.

No day passes without many drivers hurrying through intersections, passing other cars improperly, driving at too rapid a speed, or failing in other respects to use the streets and highways in a safe manner. No day passes without many pedestrians crossing in the middle of the block, darting out into the streets from behind parked vehicles, crossing intersections against signal lights, and in other ways using the streets and highways improperly.

The consequences of such acts are the deaths and the non-fatal injuries which occur in our midst and in every town and city of the United States. The improper practices occur at such a frequency that it is impossible for the police or other authorities to even begin to cope with the situation, inasmuch as it is apparent that a greater degree of safety in the use of our streets and highways can only be realized as people, of their own free will, co-operate among themselves to that end.

In keeping with the motives of the country-wide street and highway safety movement in September, I urge upon drivers and pedestrians alike in this city to set examples of public conduct in the use of streets and highways which will insure the greatest possible safety, not only for themselves while they are on the streets and highways, but for all others, and I request that special attention be given by the proper officials of the city in the enforcement of laws and ordinances which have been designed for the protection of all.

H. H. SMITH, Mayor.

INCREASED REGISTRATION OF AUTOMOBILES IN STATE

Seen as another indication of returning prosperity, motor vehicle registrations are advancing sharply in California. In a report filed by Theo. J. Roche, director of the Department of Motor Vehicles, it was said the increase has been moving steadily for the last four months, coincident with President Roosevelt's national recovery program. The total gain for the months of April, May, June and July was reported by Roche as being 23,486 over the corresponding period of 1932.

JEFFERSON FACULTY ENJOY VACATION

Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson spent six weeks on their date ranch in the Coachella valley. Their time was occupied by working among the palms, especially in cutting offshoots from the palms and transplanting others. Mr. Ferguson states that he and his wife enjoyed the vacation thoroughly and feel that it was a most perfect change from their regular work.

Miss Gibbins' vacation was divided up between staying at home to work and going on week-end trips. She visited Twain Heart, near Sonora, for ten days, and spent a week at Escalon with friends. Miss Edna Smith spent two weeks in Mill Valley and later spent a few days in San Jose. Miss Staib stayed in San Pedro during a part of her vacation, but returned in a short time to San Francisco for the remainder. Miss Robinson motored to Oregon and as far north as Astoria. She visited in Seattle for a week and then continued to Victoria, B. C. She also visited Mount Rainier, Mount Hood, Crater lake and the Oregon caves. The entire trip lasted about six weeks.

Miss Torello sailed for Prince Rupert, where she left for Jasper National Park, in Alberta. There she stayed for about a month. Mrs. Brown motored through the Canadian Rockies also. Miss Hoover spent part of her vacation in Palo Alto, with short visits in Yosemite, Oakland and Santa Cruz.

Mr. and Mrs. Junker went north to Crater Lake National Park, where they stayed for about two weeks. Mr. Biggs and his bride motored to Vancouver, leaving there to take a round trip to Skagway, Alaska. Altogether they spent about four weeks. Mrs. Willoughby and her husband spent their honeymoon and vacation as one, staying for four days in Yosemite and ten days in San Diego. Mrs. Songer states that her time was taken up by keeping house for her husband. Mr. and Mrs. Quirmbach spent the summer traveling in various places in Southern California and Arizona. Mr. Gray and his family spent two weeks in Walla Walla, Washington, during the first part of July. Mr. Paterson spent ten days of his leisure time at Stanford attending a Vocational Guidance Conference. He also used up several days with his family in Yosemite.

Mr. Van Houte and his family spent nine weeks on Mr. Van Houte's ranch in Mendocino county. He states that most of his time was taken up by fishing, cutting trees and hunting. Mr. Hackley spent most of his time at home, with one week spent in Oregon, fishing.

Mr. Saiz motored across the continent, stopping in Chicago for the Century of Progress Exposition, and then on eastward to Washington, D. C., New York and Boston. Miss D. Smith spent her vacation much the same way.

Jefferson started its football season last Monday with more than thirty-five young men aspiring for football honors. The first part of the week was spent in loosening up the muscles by light scrimmage. In a scrimmage rpactice game held with Lowell the Jefferson boys showed surprising possibilities, as they are a light squad and small in stature.

The team is getting ready for their official game with Balboa today on the home field. With practically a whole team of veterans against Balboa's four veterans, Jefferson has a good chance of winning the game. Last year Balboa won the game by a score of 13 to 12, but this year the score may be in favor of Jefferson.

San Mateo Board Cuts County Salary Budget

The San Mateo county board of supervisors last Saturday made the first cut in the county salary budget, trimming County Manager Kellogg's estimated expenditures by $2,390. One of Kellogg's two clerks was eliminated, saving $2,040, and the manager's allowance for "traveling and entertainment" was cut from $600 to $250 a year. Roscoe D. Wyatt, county publicity director, will also assume clerical duties in the manager office. His salary will remain at $3,000.

Agricultural Commissioner Max J. Leonard's $11,000 budget, providing for an additional assistant and a clerk, was tentatively approved.

Asa Keyes is Pardoned; Restored to Citizenship

Complete freedom, restoration of citizenship and the chance to practice his profession were given Asa Keyes, former district attorney of Los Angeles, last Saturday, when Governor Rolph unconditionally pardoned him of a charge of criminal conspiracy. Keyes was convicted in 1928 in connection with the Julian Oil Company scandal. At the time he was Los Angeels county district attorney.

The prosecutor was sentenced to serve five years in San Quentin. In nineteen months, however, he was paroled. His parole would have expired next October.

Colma-Vista Grande Aerie No. 1848, F. O. E., is preparing for its twenty-fifth anniversary dinner, to be held in February, 1934. An active committee has been appointed, with Otto Schramm as chairman, to get ready for this event. The proceeds from the monthly whist and other events to be promoted each month will be used to pay the expenses of the anniversary celebration. The committee expects this to be the greatest event ever held in Daly City.

Local P. T. A. Members Attend District Meeting

Several members of the Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande P. T. A. attended the first meeting of the year of the Seventeenth District at Burlingame high school last Friday. There were more than 150 members registered at that meeting. Those attending from this unit were: President Norma Andersen, Past President Marguerite Woodside, Mrs. Legge, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Rae, Mrs. Callsen, Mrs. Page, Mrs. Pazola and Mrs. Hutchings.

The State President, Mrs. Hayes, was present and gave a very interesting address.

Mrs. Owen, the president of the San Francisco Second District, gave a very good talk on schools—their aims and methods in training the children.

Mr. Homer Martin, of San Mateo high school, gave a talk on the good of the Parent-Teachers' Association and its relation to the school. He wished the Association much success as they start on the year.

Mrs. Bartlett, the Past District President, and Mrs. Garland, our present District President, gave a very splendid report on the State Convention at Long Beach.

The Seventeenth District is the highest in California in the sale of the Parent-Teachers' magazine.

One of the aims of the Association this year is to get more fathers interested in the work of the association in its efforts to help the schools, the children, to create more harmony between the teachers and the students, and to help in student aid. To this end our President, Mrs. Norma Andersen, is first holding a monster benefit whist in the Daly City Auditorium on the evening of September 28. All proceeds from this whist will go to assist children who need aid here in our own schools. Following this whist there will be an intensive membership drive, made particularly to enroll the fathers. We ask the co-operation of every organization in Daly City to make this whist a success, because the money will be used to help those who need it very much.

We urge that as many members as possibly can, please attend the regular meeting, as the room which has the most mothers represented is the proud possessor of a large beautiful plaque of the Parent-Teachers' Association emblem for one month. The regular meeting is held the third Tuesday of every month. The second Tuesday of each month is the executive board meeting. Members are always welcome. On the fourth Tuesday of each month there will be a sewing club. All members are invited. All meetings are held at the Woodrow Wilson school.

IMPLEMENT DISPLAY AT THE STATE FAIR

Farm machinery manufacturers are banking on the agricultural recovery of California.

To the tune of nearly one million dollars, they are sending exhibits to the California State Fair which opens in Sacramento, September 2. Not since the opening of the great Arcade farm machinery building has such a variety of displays been assembled. Mining machinery and other non-agricultural exhibits formerly shown in the pavilion will this year have to take other quarters.

Working with the division of agriculture engineering of the college of agriculture of the University of California, the implement industry will this year present a full line of farm tools particularly adapted to California conditions and crops.

New equipment for the spraying, dusting, and washing of fruit will show the orchardist how to overcome the problem of spray residue on fruits.

A large section of the machinery building will be given over to gasoline and electric pumping equipment, which will be operating about the pool in the central court. Reflecting the growing interest during the year in internal combustion units, many new models will be shown, ranging from the small "stove top" engine up to the large Diesel units.

Factory engineers, service specialists and other representatives will be present in larger numbers than for the past five years, according to W. V. Freeman, secretary of the Tractor and Implement Club of California, which is arranging the display.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH TO OBSERVE COMMUNION

Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock, Holy Communion will be observed in the Presbyterian church of Daly City. The subject of the sermon will be "A Reasonable Request." In the evening at 7:45, church service will be held, when the pastor will speak on "Signs." Strangers are always welcome at this friendly church.

County Taxpayers Granted Extension Under New Act

Owners of 505 parcels of property in San Mateo county advertised for sale at public auction for delinquent taxes this year, and an equally large number scheduled for next year, will be given additional time in which to redeem their land. The extensions are provided by an act passed by the state legislature, granting a two year moratorium on tax sales.

Tax Collector A. M. McSweeney said the law provides that no delinquent tax sale may be held before January 1, 1935. The order will affect the 1933 delinquent tax sale, which was scheduled by McSweeney for August 29. The sale must be advertised, along with a delinquent tax list, and registered mail notices sent to those whose property would have been sold under the old law, according to the tax collector.

The 505 parcels scheduled for sale this year went delinquent when the owners failed to make their 1927 tax payments, while those which would have been sold next year became delinquent when the 1928 tax payments were not made. The property was deeded to the state, and a five year period ensued before they would be sold. The moratorium measure will extend the period to seven years for property which went delinquent in 1927, and to six years for property delinquent in 1928.

"The purpose of the bill," Mr. McSweeney said, "is to give the property owners additional time in which to redeem their property. There are many who do not want to lose their property, but who would be forced to if this bill had not passed, since they have not the money with which to make the back tax payments. The bill will give them two years more in which to raise the money.

"I am confident that during the coming two years there are many who would have otherwise lost their property who will be able to make the back payments and clear their land."

The moratorium will have the effect of keeping the property scheduled for sale off the tax rolls for an additional two years. During the time it is deeded to the state the county can collect no taxes, and it is not until the back taxes have been paid and a new owner is given title that the property goes back on the tax roll.

BREEDER TO LOCATE NEAR TANFORAN

Encouraged by the promised class of meetings at Tanforan under the pari-mutuel racing law, breeders of thoroughbreds are devoting a good deal of time to the expansion of their holdings in blood stock. In addition to the Californians established for some time, recently adopted "natives" such as Kay Spence, are purchasing farms not far from Tanforan for the rearing of the highest type of running horse.

Henry Potter Russell, a pioneer member of the Pacific Coast Breeders Association, the organization that brought back racing to California in 1930, has begun the augmentation of his nursery by acquiring some matrons from George Winfield and they have been shipped from Reno to the Russell haras in the Carmel valley.

With such strains as those of imported Mackenzie II, General Thatcher and the Cambridgeshire winner Honeywood, to say nothing of the blood of the well remembered Celesta, one of the fastest mares that ever looked through a bridle in this country, represented in the lot, their owner may well anticipate worthy progeny.

Reported to be in foal to the young stallion Tarpaulin, a record breaker himself, of the popular Ultimus line, the matrons will be sent in the spring to the court of Wildair, a sire of wide reputation, that breeder Russell purchased several years ago.

Wildair of the Ben Brush-Domino plan of mating, raced in the same seasons as the mighty Man o'War and earned a large sum for the Whitneys, who bred him. As a progenitor he was an immediate success, sending Sir Harry, Canter and other stakes winners to the races on the big time. It will be recalled both Sir Harry and Canter won more than $100,000 in purses.

Red Wagon, a candidate for championship honors among the two-year-olds, is a Canter. The youngster scored in the United States Hotel stakes at Saratoga the other day in a field of the outstanding "babies" of the season. Canter's son has a record of three victories and one second in four starts. As a grandson of Wildair, Red Wagon is adding measurably to the fame of the Russell stallion.

Claude J. Hirchey, of San Mateo, has been named San Mateo county appraiser for the Home Owners Loan Corporation, part of the federal administration's recovery program, it was reported Monday. The report added that W. H. Morrissey, of Redwood City, has been appointed corporation attorney for San Mateo county.

MANY DEER ARE KILLED BY CALIFORNIA HUNTERS

Deer hunters in the coastal game districts, which opened August 1, have had much better luck during the opening week this year than last. The number of tage returned to the State Fish and Game Commission this year is 20 per cent more than were turned in for the first seven days shoot in 1932. With a Sunday shoot included in the tabulations for both years, the figures for the first week's hunting are: 1933, 1,532; and 1932, 1,249.

Deer were killed in every county of the coastal area, with the exception of San Francisco. Mendocino county continued to be the leading hunting grounds along the coast.

CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

Two watermelons of new varieties were tested this year in Westmorland. The seeds were brought from Palestine by T. T. Langlois.

Headquarters for District No. 3 of the State Highway Department will be moved to Marysville and for District No. 10 to Stockton on October 1, Director of Public Works Earl Lee Kelly announced.

Alleging failure to cooperate and comply with the by-laws, the board of directors of the Allied Automotive industries of California has expelled the San Francisco Garage Owners' Association from its membership.

Appointment of Oscar R. Howard and William Keck of Los Angeles as additional members of the State Recovery Board was announced in a telegram by Governor Rolph from Gen. Johnson, recovery administrator.

San Quentin Prison's "garden beautiful," hidden from most Californians, will be transplanted in part to the Durant-DeVaux building in San Leandro next month for the ninth annual California Flower Festival, September 14-17, the management has been informed.

Improvements are noticed in the standards of eggs, Dr. Giles S. Porter, head of the State Department of Public Health, states in a report to Gov. Rolph. Nine concerns were prosecuted, he said, for violation of the egg standardization law. Fines imposed totaled $275.

Stamped, sealed and delivered, more than 150 California postmasters will arrive in San Jose a year hence for the 1934 convention of the California Postmasters' Association. The news came in an announcement made by Postmaster J. Derrol Chace in Pasadena, where the 1933 convention was held.

Heads of California's state institutions should take it upon themselves to prevent the marriage of feeble-minded persons released on parole. This is the opinion of Attorney General U. S. Webb, who has given a ruling on the subject to Carl E. Applegate, chief of accounting officer of the institutions department.

After perusing the state sales tax bill in search of loopholes, Attorney General U. S. Webb has discovered one way to beat paying the tax. Go to prison. In an opinion to Warden Court Smith of Folsom, the attorney general rules that prisoners making purchases from the pintentiary commissary are not required to pay the state tax.

N. A. Mackey, Imperial, was elected president of the California Postmasters Association at the closing session of the association's three-day meeting in Pasadena. J. C. Tyrrell, Grass Valley, was elected first vice president; C. G. Huntington, South Gate, second vice president; H. M. Hammond, Alameda, was re-elected secretary-treasurer; B. C. Dowing, Santa Clara, was named editor of the California Postmaster, official publication of the association, and W. W. Bernhardt, Ventura, was re-elected sergeant-at-arms.

Every state in the Union and numerous foreign countries were represented in California's huge tourist crop during the first half of 1933. State Register of Motor Vehicles Russell J. Bevans announces 37,529 cars were issued non-resident permits at the border checking stations. He estimates at least 150,000 persons came into the state on the highways during the Winter, Spring and early Summer. Brazil, China, Haiti, Prince Edward Island, England, France and Germany are among the countries included in the tourist total. Oregon topped the states with 4,967 cars. Colorado sent in 2,160, Texas 2,000, New York 1,504, and Illinois 1,452.

California Legionnaires, meeting in Pasadena in their annual state convention recently, elected Frank Whittemore of Pomona grand chief de gare, highest office in the "Forty and Eight," the stunt society of the organization. Other officers elected were: W. D. Kesselring, Sacramento, grand chef de tram; Tom Estabrook, Los Angeles, grand commissaire de l'intendance; John Pennington, San Bernardino, grand conductor, and William Riley, Sacramento, grande garde de la porte. Places on the executive committee were voted to I. W. Bouldin, Vallejo; H. G. Waters, Watsonville; Gordon Lewis, Fellows; Oliver Powell, Glendora; R. E. Smith, Anaheim, and C. J. Mello of Stockton. Mello also was named national committeeman.

Fred Meyer, chief of the division of service and supply, state finance department, and member of the state board of control, will be retained by the Rolph administration despite the fact the legislature appropriated no money to pay him. Finance officers said it is planned to pay Meyer's salary of $5,000 a year out of the state emergency fund. In view of the dual capacity in which Meyer serves and the fact the legislature did not abolish his position, the announcement said it is felt an allowance from the emergency fund is justified.

Peach growers of Tulare have been guaranteed a minimum of $600,000 for their crop this year, according to word received from Ray Wiser, representative of the California Farm Bureau federation, while in Washington attending the peach hearing.

The Veterans' Welfare Board at Sacramento is empowered to employ an attorney, Atty.-Gen. Webb declared, in spite of the bill Gov. Rolph signed May 3, providing that State departments cannot employ legal counsel. Webb pointed out that on May 28 the Governor signed a bill providing the Veterans' Board could hire expert legal or clerical help and that this bill supersedes the May 3 measure.

Palo Alto, the sunny university city, holds and enjoys a reputation for being different. Palo Alto carried out the tradition by voting to be one of the few communities in California where the sale of 3.2 beer is prohibited. When the last ballot was counted recently it was found the voters had defeated a city charter amendment to permit the sale of brew by a vote of 1,174 to 1,016, a dry majority of 158. So Palo Alto will remain beerless.

Warm weather during July dropped the forecast production of cling peaches in California by 22,000 tons, as shown by estimates prepared by E. E. Kaufman, chief of the federal-state crop reporting service. Kaufman now forecasts a yield of 343,000 tons, against an expectation of 365,000 on July 1st. He declines to state the amount of the crop which will rate as No. 1. Freestone peaches are predicted at 191,000 tons, about the same as a month ago.

The per capita expense of Folsom prison reached a new low during the last fiscal year, Finance Director Rolland A. Vandegrift has reported. The total per capita cost of the upkeep of the prison, including such items as food, clothing, hospitalization, guarding, administration and maintenance, was $177.11 during the last fiscal year. This was the equivalent of 48½ cents an inmate a day. Warden Smith has been given a tentative budget of $187.07 for next year.

Despite the hot weather, beer drinking in California apparently has been decreasing this Summer. State board of equalization beer tax experts have predicted a slight decrease in revenue for the last month from the levy of 62 cents a barrel. In June the state took in $72,012 on distribution of 3,600,629 gallons of the 3.2 per cent beverage. Thus far the collections for beer wholesaled by manufacturers during July has come to only about $69,000. Forecasts of a slight income drop are based upon the fact only twenty small breweries out of 162 in the state are yet to report.

Developed by A. B. Stewart, for twenty-six years a Southern California olive grower, an olive oil plant, complete with hydraulic presses and underground storage tanks, was opened in Exeter recently as a new addition to Exeter industry. Stewart, who once owned 100 acres of olive orchards in San Bernardino county, moved to Exeter last fall and acquired the 160-acre Gentry grove, the crop from which will be pressed in the new plant. In addition, the output of some 500 acres between Lindsay and Orange Cove, will be processed, Stewart said. Only the highest grade fruit will be processed for its oil. The remainder of the crop will be pickled.

Fresno was selected as the 1934 meeting place of the California Turkey Growers' Association, during the annual session recently in Marysville.

R. G. Weidemier of Orland was re-elected president. Other officers for the new year are: E. E. Comstock, Pleasant Grove, vice president; W. C. Marshall, Fresno, secretary-treasurer; Paul Rhea, Chowchilla, and A. C. Boggess, Arbuckle, members of the executive committee; J. Henry Stevens of Marysville, W. H. Lewis of Oroville, C. J. Koopman of Corning, Roy P. Bethel of Templeton, H. S. Cawelti of Terra Bella, Arthur Tomey of Waterford, A. C. Rapp of Turlock, S. C. Nolan of Sacramento, and Frank DeWitt of Lincoln, board of directors. George Makins of San Francisco will continue as genera manager.

California is spending the price of six candy bars a day each on her school children for educational purposes. Said in another way, it is costing the State 30 cents a day each to educate its youngsters. Nationally the country spends twice as much for candy and tobacco as it does for education. These interesting side lights are furnished by Dr. Marvin L. Darsie of the University of California Teachers' College at Los Angeles in a survey of national education and its costs. In 1928, Dr. Darsie finds, the Nation spent $2,448,633,561 on public education in all its phases. In the same year it laid down $3,991,460,000 for candy and tobacco. California spent $130,186,176, which is an average of $98.57 per year for every child in its elementary schools.

State Finance Director Vandegrift said he is negotiating with certain oil companies, including th Standard Oil Company, by which the State will receive revenue from oil taken from under the State's tidelands. He said at Huntington Beach are seventeen wells that were drilled on the "upland" and that they are draining oil from pools that extend under the State's tidelands. The negotiations may be completed, Vandegrift said, within thirty days, but he could not estimate the amount of royalty the State will receive.

Bulgaria Speeds Up

Pig for Sale in a Sofia Street.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

BETWEEN the Danube and the Macedonian mountains the traveler sees hardly a single farmhouse; yet "Bulgar" means a man with a plow, and four of every five Bulgarians are farmers. Sofia, founded by Trajan, just missed becoming Constantinople, since Constantine seriously considered it as his capital. Still a small town in 1880, it is now a flourishing city of a quarter of a million inhabitants, the progressive capital of a land of villages.

Although, since hoary antiquity, tidal waves of humanity have swept south through the Balkan passes or east and west along the route to Byzantium, this cross-roads country is still far from the beaten path.

Yet the Orient express passes through Sofia every day, and on the Orient Arrow it is a day's flight from Paris, whose styles it has begun to copy. Before daylight you don the seventy-league boots awaiting you at Le Bourget, airport of Paris; touch earth at Strasbourg, Nurnberg, Prague, Vienna, Budapest and Belgrade, and end the day in your sixth European capital.

Despite the increase in numbers of city dwellers, seeking to buy amusement in the open market, scanning movie posters and photographs of sleek cabaret girls, Bulgaria is an agricultural land, with peasant conservatism and thrift. Among the more or less formal Thanksgiving proclamations of recent times, surely one of the most arresting was Bulgaria's "Our poverty is our riches." A land of homespun may be proof against not only spiritual but also economic depression.

Were one to seek a symbol for economics and spiritual stability, the Bulgarian woman, plying her distaff as she leads meek-eyed oxen through bucolic scenes worthy of a Rose Bonheur, might well serve as a model. But even the Bulgarian Maud Miller has "glanced to the far-off town."

Going Ahead Rapidly.

The rural Bulgarians, whose riches are poverty, are awaking to new desires. Bulgarians have long fostered schools, literature, music, and the drama. But "progress" now means something different—not a lifting up, but a speeding up. City styles and pleasures are stealing the spotlight. An old Bulgarian proverb says, "Easier to start the piper than to stop him," and Bulgaria has begun to tread a faster measure than ox-team or buffalo have set or can follow.

One finds in Bulgaria many graduates of Constantinople Woman's college, and of Robert college in Istanbul. There are also several excellent American schools in Bulgaria itself. American educators have approached the problems of Bulgaria with sympathetic understanding. The boys' and girls' schools of Samokov have been united to form a co-educational American college; but, in deference to Bulgarian conservatism, an imaginary line, cutting the campus in two, still separates the sexes.

In Pordim there is a more unusual school with a one-year course designed for dirt farmers, who there learn to do by doing. Future mothers practice on real babies before having babies of their own. Even in a land where veterinary schools and hospitals rival those for human beings, there is no other institution quite like the American farm school, which gains prestige from its American patronage.

Tirnovo, former capital at a time when defense was more than trade routes, straddles a neck of land tunneled by the railway and rises above wild mid-city gorges as does Luxembourg. On the Mount of Eagles stands the city of today, linked by a narrow isthmus with the Hill of the Tsars, walled region of the former royal palaces. A colony of monasteries occupies another hilltop and the aristocrats a fourth.

Varna Becomes a Summer Resort.

Varna, on the Black sea, used to be a grain port, but when the boundary makers gave the rich granary of the Dobruja to Rumania the city lost its commercial importance. When wheat failed, little drops of water and little grains of sand did their bit. On the splendid sea front, commodious bathhouses and seaside villas were built, and summer visitors now flock in from all over central Europe to revel in sea and sun.

For a time the authorities tried to reserve the central section for married folks; but they persisted in forgetting to bring their marriage licenses, and mixed bathing is now firmly established. On the wings are screened sections where men and women are isolated and can dispense with suits, lie in the hot sand and let Old Sol shoot health into them through every pore.

Deprived of Dobruja's bread, Varna decided to eat cake; and vacationers in increasing numbers share and provide the fun. Hotels claim to offer Bulgarian, Hungarian, Bohemian, and German cooking, but French habits are not yet understood. In Bulgaria one eats chocolate but drinks cocoa.

South of Varna is Mesemvriya, where Byzantine emperors used to disport themselves in the Euxine. From the sands many antique treasures have been rescued, and there still exist imposing ruins of Byzantine churches.

Military service is not obligatory in Bulgaria, though it is expedient; but, in addition to the few days of temporary labor which male subjects are supposed to render to their country, every eighteen-year-old does eight months of obligatory labor under what resembles military discipline.

Lands are reclaimed, roads and bridges built, railways repaired, eroding mountain sides reforested, rampant rivers tamed, relief shelters constructed, and good citizenship learned by these organized laborers, or trudovaks. Their badge reads, "Work for Bulgaria." This labor corps is one of the most distinctive features of modern Bulgarian life.

Protective tariff walls always look lower from the inside, and in Bulgaria, as elsewhere, a heightened nationalism jealously guards its infant industries. To its fine woolens the country has already added sugar, cotton cloth, silks, flour, baby carriages, bicycles, hides, paper, cigarettes, rubber shoes, and even automobile tires. Although cereals, tobacco, eggs, and chickens are among the principal exports, Bulgaria's most distinctive product is attar of roses, of which it produces three-fourths of the world's supply.

Rose Industry Important.

Jahangir, the Mogul emperor, amused Nur Jahan by piping rose water through her garden at Delhi, and upon its surface she first discovered the bright pearls of attar. Later an old Turk, seeing the wild roses of Bulgaria, induced his compatriots to start the industry which won for the plain between the Balkans and the Middle Mountain the name of "The Rose Valley."

The rose, as symbol of beauty, innocence and modesty, has inspired countless legends and songs ever since it was born with Aphrodite from the sea foam or sprang from Rosalie's wound, inflicted by the chaste but intolerant Diana. But one doesn't use perfume to prove innocence, and a rose smells even sweeter under many strange names. Attar of roses is used as a base and fixative rather than for its scent alone, and the skilled perfumer determines whether this product of peasants shall suggest floppy-brimmed hats and flowered chiffon or sleek silks and exotic earrings.

These unspoiled Bulgarian peasants, who never knew luxury, depend on it for their daily bread, and although they know no political economy, it affects both their economies and their politics. Because of the competition between private and co-operative distillers, rose oil has come to involve bankers and politicians as well as gardeners. The old firms are not only finding a decreased sale, but are also facing the competition of co-operative distilleries opened under government protection and boom conditions.

The attar of roses produced by the co-operatives is deposited as collateral in the Agricultural bank, which, although already holding a thousand pounds or so of attar, must still advance funds on the new crop.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—Some twenty-five or thirty newspaper correspondents were privileged the other day to witness the start of a new stage in the national drive for economic recovery. It is unfortunate there were only those few persons able to witness that which I am convinced is going down in history as an event worthy of recollection. It is unfortunate that more persons were unable to see the spectacle of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, the recovery administrator, in that moment of determination, his eyes glaring, his jaws set. It was decisive.

"He Ain't Goin' to Fool Wid Em"

The incident to which I refer was when General Johnson, at one of his regular conferences with newspaper correspondents, announced that the time was near, if, indeed, it had not already arrived "when somebody is going to take one of those blue eagles off the window of some business house" because that business house failed to live up to its pledges in the code.

"And," General Johnson added with all of the grim determination of the army officer that he was, "when that happens, it is going to be an economic death sentence. That outfit will be nearly through."

He leveled a finger at the correspondents that, under the atmosphere created by his earlier remarks, seemed for all the world to me like it might go off. There was no braggadocio. It was a positive declaration, this assertion that some of those who promised to do their part would try to cheat. And the added remark that such a business house was economically sentenced to death when their pet blue eagle insignia was taken down was as sternly said as though it had been an actual sentence of death from the lips of a jurist. I repeat, it was impressive.

I do not know how effective this threat will be. No one does, because it never has been done in peace time in this country. But make no mistake about it: the individual who attempts to balk General Johnson is going to have both hands full. To employ a favorite expression of a colored boy whom I know: "He ain't goin' to fool wid 'em."

* * *

General Johnson's remarks on that occasion illustrate better than other words available to me the developments thus far in the great campaign to lift this country out of the economic depression. Heretofore, and it still continues, the effort was to get businesses into line, into agreement to stand united and work for the common good. Those agreements among the individual businesses were, and are, agreements with and promises to the President of the United States that each will make the necessary sacrifices, the required concessions, that a given result may be attained. Everyone hopes for better times. That is the end sought, and the signing of codes, including the promises of individuals who buy things to deal only where the blue eagle is displayed, was just the preliminary work.

Now, however, the national recovery administration has reached the point where the enterprise must either succeed or fail. There are to be no more soft words. The decisive moment has come. General Johnson's determination that "he ain't goin' to fool wid 'em," has placed the entire power of a sovereign nation behind that which has been done.

Powerful Weapon

This blue eagle insignia is a powerful weapon. It may later fall into disrepute, but, however that may be, the display of that poster now is having an enormous effect. For instance, General Johnson's attention was called to the status of public utilities operating wholly within a state, a unit unto itself and not subject to the jurisdiction of the federal government. He replied that the blue eagle knows no state lines.

"This blue eagle doesn't know anything about interstate or intrastate commerce," he said. "If the recovery act fails to reach such corporations, the blue eagle will reach them."

And so the stage is set for the drive to encourage people to buy now and to buy only from those displaying the blue eagle.

Let us look into this program. The call to buy now represents a move to get people to let loose of money they have been holding back on account of uncertainty (if they have had such money) and thus to provide the distribution agencies such as retail stores with business and, of course, profit. If the retailer sells, he must buy from his source, which is the wholesaler or the jobber, and when they have disposed of their stock they must seek replacements from the manufacturer. He, in turn, if he is going to remain in business, must manufacture replacements, and thus the cycle has been set in motion.

But there is more to it than just the proposition of moving goods along from producer to consumer. Each time that the consumer sets the cycle in motion by making a purchase, he adds theoretically at least to the probability of more jobs for workers. He also adds to the possibility of a profit for all of those handling the commodity.

There has not been a time in recent years that stocks of manufactured goods in warehouses of the country were as low as they are now. It is a condition known as hand-to-mouth buying. One result of that condition is that when a retailer, for example, sells a couple more suits of clothes or shoes or dresses, he is out of those sizes or styles. Unless he goes back to the wholesaler immediately and buys replacements, he cannot make further sales of those particular things. So it is with the wholesaler, and the manufacturer has no great stocks piled up either. If he refills empty shelves, he has to put people to work to do it. When he hires workers, the money they are paid immediately is spent because tens of thousands of them have been out of jobs and with no money to spend even for barest necessities.

General Johnson's purpose, therefore, is twofold. He is driving hard to get people to buy now if they have money with which to do it that the cycle of business may be set in motion full swing again and thus, if successful, the plan will provide jobs for workers, profit for the dealers and manufacturers and markets for the producers of the raw materials. In pleading for consumers to buy only from establishments where the blue eagle of N. R. A. is displayed, General Johnson seeks to cement the united effort for recovery and at the same time repay those who have made the concessions necessary for such a movement by turning the business to them.

Wheat Acreage Program

With the destruction of cotton crop surplus under way in every cotton-growing state, the agricultural adjustment administration has concentrated its attention on getting the wheat acreage program started, which, indeed, it has been in more than a preliminary way. Previously, I reported that Secretary Wallace figured a wheat crop of not more than 460,000,000 bushels next year was all that would be necessary. Accordingly, withdrawing of thousands of acres from planting will be necessary.

Now, the adjustment administration has sent out orders to farm extension agents wherever counties have them and has appointed temporary workers where no county agents exist, and these people are laying the ground work for wheat farmers to sign contracts with their government. The contracts will provide for withholding of acreage and the farmers will be paid for giving up that acreage through the funds obtained by the processing tax on wheat as it is milled into flour.

Something like 1,100 agents, either permanent county agents or temporary appointees by the Department of Agriculture, are at work in twenty-three states. They are taking the initiative in organizing the farmers, explaining to them what the purposes of the acreage reduction program are and how they will be compensated by joining in the plan.

* * *

Success Is Assured

Chester C. Davis, director of the wheat production division in the agriculture adjustment administration, entertains no doubt at all about the ultimate success of the program. Nor does Dr. M. L. Wilson, of the same group, who has been in close touch with actual wheat farmers. They are agreed that it will go over just as rapidly as the farmers can have the thing explained to them.

In the meantime, however, the millers of wheat are suffering, and the Department of Agriculture is playing tag with the grain exchanges and boards of trade. The millers obviously are kicking about the burdensome processing tax which they say is difficult to pass on to the consumers fully. The boards of trade and the Department of Agriculture are snarling and biting at each other over a different matter, but settlement of their differences will affect the results of the acreage reduction campaign. So the whole thing constitutes one picture.

The grain exchanges have been criticized without end by Secretary Wallace and the others in positions of responsibility on the farm problem. Secretary Wallace has told the grain dealers they have to come under a code, like other businesses, and they have submitted a code for his consideration which he does not like at all. The secretary wants to keep the "little fellows" out of the grain speculation. He feels they have no business there and that their marginal trading has been the cause of some of the violent fluctuations in prices because they cannot always put up more money if the price falls out from under them. The code submitted by the exchanges leaves more power in the hands of the exchange governing boards than Mr. Wallace wants to leave there, and fails also to reduce the speculative factors the secretary thinks necessary.

So the situation is tense. It is proper to say, I believe, that restrictions already thrown around grain trading have virtually abolished contract markets.

JOHNSON ISSUES WARNING

The Blue Eagle has claws. That is the intimation in recent utterances of Administrator Johnson, aggressive head of national recovery drive.

Businesses which display the blue eagle insignia without having signed agreements are in for trouble. So are businesses which fail to keep to the intent, written or implied, of the code. So, according to General Johnson, is anyone withdrawing the blue eagle from his place of business.

The flood of signed agreements continues. Even though there must be a good deal of readjustment before certain businesses will be able to make N. R. A. principles work, either under the blue eagle or in a trade code, there is almost unanimous sentiment in favor of Administration procedure, with promises to do everything possible to help.

ANOTHER GREAT HELEN

Helen Jacobs, American tennis star, pinch-hitting for Helen Wills Moody in the tournament for the famous Wightman cup, took the deciding game to win the trophy, defeating her British rival, Margaret Scriven. Thus the United States team won the most coveted woman's team trophy of the tennis world for the seventh time in eleven years of play, England having won four times.

The Wightman cup was put up for competition in 1923 by Mrs. George W. Wightman of Philadelphia. Competition is open to the world, but so far only the United States and England have entered teams in the annual tournaments. Mrs. Wightman has been one of the leaders in world tennis for some fifteen years, and was national champion in 1919. She was a member of the women's championship doubles teams nearly every year since 1915.

Miss Helen Jacobs, whose brilliant playing saved the Wightman cup for the American team this year, has an impressive record, and is by many rated as second only to Helen Wills Moody, whose place she took in the recent tournament because of a slight injury to the world's champion.

Helen seems to be a prevalent name among first rank tennis stars of recent years, as witness these famous Helens—Helwig, Homans, Chapman, Wills, Baker, Gilleaudeau, Lockhorn, Jacobs and Pollack, the latter spelling her name "Helene."

WAR ON DOPE TRAFFIC

What is considered a most important step toward better control of the traffic in narcotics was taken when the international treaty adopted at Geneva in 1931 became effective last month. The treaty was adopted by delegates from 57 nations, and provides for limiting the manufacture and distribution of narcotics throughout the world.

This is a large order, but there is no doubt that the treaty will be most helpful in curbing the unbelievably vast traffic which now exists.

An important part in securing this international co-operation was taken by the World's Narcotic Defense Association, of which Captain Richmond P. Hobson of Merrimac fame is president. The next objective of the association is to secure the adoption of uniform laws respecting narcotics by the several states, these to conform to the Federal statutes on the subject.

Already three states, New York, New Jersey and Nevada, have passed the uniform law, and others will follow suit soon. There seems to be no reason why every state should not join in this movement when legislatures are again in session.

The dope habit is the most horrible of all habits to which a human being can fall victim. The dope fiend's condition is aptly described as "the living death," a veritable hell on earth. The extent to which this traffic has spread in various countries, including the United States, is appalling. Any means whereby it may be stamped out or curtailed is worthy of support by anyone who gives a thought to suffering humanity.

An automobile expert estimates that there are five million sorry cars on the road that menace traffic and ought to be replaced. And there are at least twice that many sorry drivers, ditto.

---

Poets seldom commit crimes, according to one of them. Perhaps not, except on paper.

No Willie, a "tin can tourist" isn't necessarily one who drives that kind of a car.

RECORD SMASHING YEAR

So many all-time records in sport, aviation and other competitive fields have been broken already this year that it is difficult to keep track of them. It is likely that 1933 will be known as the record smashing year in nearly all activities requiring high personal courage, endurance and skill.

Added to the feats of the Mollisons, Post, Balbo and others in aviation, comes the new non-stop record of the French aviators, Rossi and Codos, who flew from New York to Rayak, Syria, approximately 5,900 miles. This was nearly 600 miles in excess of the previous record.

New baseball history is also being made. Consider Carl Hubbell, pitcher of the New York Giants, who hurled 18 innings in a row without allowing the St. Louis Cardinals a single run, without giving a base on balls, striking out twelve, permitting only six hits in the 18-inning game which the Giants won, 1 to 0. A few days ago Hubbell had won his sixteenth straight victory, in eight of which his opponents had been allowed no runs, and had pitched forty-six consecutive innings without a score against him, an all-time record.

Dizzy Dean of the Cardinals set a new strike-out record for a single game by fanning 17 Chicago Cub batters and winning 8 to 2. The previous strike-out record for a 9-inning game was 16, held jointly by Fred Hahn, Christy Mathewson, Rube Waddell and Nap Rucker.

It would be fine if business could do a little record-breaking to keep the world of sport company.

MORE BABIES ADOPTED

It speaks well for the humane spirit of our people that the number of orphans and children of incompetent parents who have been adopted into comfortable homes has greatly increased during the depression.

In 1927 the number of such adoptions was about 100,000, while last year over 120,000 found homes with desirable foster parents. During the same period the number of homeless children who had to be cared for by institutions remained practically at a standstill, the yearly average being about 160,000.

These facts are presented by the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor in Washington, which points out that this difference between institutional and home care shows a significant trend in the housing of these unfortunate little ones.

Commenting on this humane trend, the Houston Post says: "Such children have brought joy to thousands of childless homes. The doors of every childless home in America should be thrown open to one or more of these unfortunate tots. It will mean happiness to the foster parents and a real chance for the youngsters upon whom fate has not smiled."

If our Christian faith be well founded, the adoption of a homeless child must be pleasing to Him who said: "Suffer little children to come unto Me."

WORLD POLICE PLAN

What seems to be a constructive suggestion in connection with the efforts being made to stamp out or reduce serious crimes was made at the recent international convention of police chiefs held in Chicago. It proposes a world police force, the members of which would be empowered to disregard all national boundary lines when in pursuit of criminals.

The idea of establishing such a force was advanced by Baron Collier, honorary deputy police commissioner if New York, who explained how such a body would operate to capture the criminal who crossed oceans and continents plying his profession.

It is well known that the limited jurisdiction of officers of the law seriously haidicaps them in bringing criminals to justice. When a criminal crosses a state line he can not be returned to the state in which the crime was committed without much legal formality and red tape.

An American criminal escaping to Canada, Mexico, or any other foreign country, is virtually immune from the consequences of his crime. Thousands of the most dangerous offenders against society thus escape capture and punishment.

Such a police force as Mr. Collier suggests would not need to be large. All that would be necessary would be that a few picked men in each country should be authorized by international agreement to go anywhere in the world in pursuit of criminals, with the added provision that no nation would interfere to defeat the ends of justice.

Crime is organized on a world-wide scale. It can be combatted successfully only by like organization on the part of the forces of law and order.

A GOOD WILL DESK

It has long been the custom for nations to send historic tokens of good will to one another, and the United States has sent and received many such mementoes.

One of the most interesting gifts in the possession of our government is a desk in the White House executive offices, which was presented by Queen Victoria some years before her death. The desk is of carved heavy oak and carries a brass plate with this inscription:

"H. M. S. Resolute, forming part of the expedition sent in search of Sir John Franklin in 1852, was abandoned in latitude 74 degrees 41 minutes north, longitude 101 degrees 22 minutes west, on the 15th of May, 1854. She was discovered and extricated in September, 1885, in latitude 67 degrees north by Captain Buddington, of the United States whaler George Henry. The ship was purchased, fitted out and sent to England as a gift to Her Majesty Queen Victoria, by the President and people of the United States, as a token of good will and friendship. This table was made from her timbers when she was broken up, and is presented by the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland to the President of the United States as a memorial of the courtesy and loving kindness which dictated the offer of the gift of the Resolute."

Sir John Franklin, in search of whose expedition the Resolute and many other vessels were sent, perished with his 134 officers and men while trying to find a northwest passage from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

BUNK ABOUT VITAMINS

A lot of the propaganda going about concerning dieting and vitamins is the bunk, according to Professor Solomon Strouse, a well known scientist, who declares that the normal diet of normal persons provides all the vitamins needed.

All this talk about vitamins, he says, is something comparatively new, dating only from 1911. Much attention has been given to the subject, but even today little is really known about it. Manufacturers of yeast and special foods have attempted to capitalize the popular idea that vitamins are an all-important component of one's diet, but many of the claims made by advertisers of food fads are foolish.

Professor Strouse asserts that all nutritional needs will be met by a diet including a quart of milk daily, two fresh salads, two servings of leafy vegetables, one serving of meat and liberal quantities of butter, cereals, fruit, bread and water.

He adds that when the nutritional needs of people suffer because of poverty or a disturbance of the food supply, ill health can apparently be traced to the lack of something in the diet, but this does not necessarily mean a deficiency in any particular vitamins.

From all of which it may be concluded that almost any kind of wholesome food provides a satisfactory diet, so far as maintaining health is concerned. But faddists must have their fads, and if following a fad makes a faddist happier, why not let him (often her) go to it?

RENOVIZE THE UNITED STATES

Eighty-five per cent of Americans are inadequately housed. Seventy-five per cent live in hand-me-down quarters, bare of modern comforts and conveniences. Where our annual building expenditure in 1928 was $6,500,000,000, it was only $2,000,000,000 last year.

These facts appear in an editorial in the St. Clairsville, Ohio, Chronicle. And, as the editorial further points out, there are sound indications that a major building revival is on its way. Every American desires better living conditions; millions of Americans have been prevented from achieving them the past few years because of financial distress or fear of the future. That fear is now being allayed—recovery has started, and it can be seen in all parts of the country. Men are going back to work, factory chimneys are smoking—and dollars are finding their way into the pockets from where they will go to buy the necessities of life. A good many of these dollars will either be used to build new homes, or rebuild and modernize old ones.

It's time for a national campaign to "Renovize the United States." That would speed recovery and be the most potent influence that could be brought to play in stabilizing price levels and providing employment.

Remember that employment and investment are better and cheaper than charity. Remember, too, that in a few months, when the building boom gets under way, prices are going up and are going to stay up. Get in on the "building bargains" while they are still being offered.

THE SILVER LINING

Profits! Industry has been going along for three and one-half years practically without them. This month there has been a turn. Companies which have been running constantly in the red are furnishing a market for black ink. Investors who have become used to going without dividends are looking forward to the reappearance of quarterly or semi-annual checks.

Here is how improved business is reflected in the balance-sheets of some specific large companies:

Chrysler Corporation—In the June quarter, net equaled $1.80 a share, totaling $2,310,000. This is within 23 per cent of the company's record, achieved in the booming third quarter of 1928.

U. S. Steel—Twelve months ago it reported an operating loss of more than $3,000,000. In the last three months it had a profit of $4,880.000.

General Motors—Last year it had second-quarter profits of seven cents a share; this year it reported a net of ninety cents per share.

U. S. Industrial Alcohol—Profits in first half of 1932 came to $32,000; same period in 1933, $229,000.

All businesses haven't had an equally happy quartr or half year. But the general trend of profits is definitely upward. Most important of all is sharp improvement in the earings of small business whose fortunes don't constitute headline news. They represent the bulk of American capital investment, and their position is a great deal more solid than it was even a month or two ago.

THIS WEEK'S TRAGEDY

During the coming week a ghastly tragedy will occur.

Two hundred or more lives will be destroyed. Property valued at about $8,000,000 will be reduced to ashes. Because of it, businesses will close, men will lose their jobs, taxes will increase.

You won't hear much about it—because it won't all happen at once. It will be divided among a thousand communities, a thousand different kinds of property. The destruction of a great factory or a portable garage will all contribute to it.

The world remembers the great fires—the Iriquois theatre, the Cleveland hospital, the little school at Collinsville. What the world does not realize is that these fires are no worse than those that take place every week in this so-called civilized world, and which, by cumulative action, even exceed these single disasters in loss of life and property. Many years can pass without the occurrence of a fire as horrible as that in the Iriquois theatre—but each year witnesses the destruction of ten thousand lives and half a billion dollars in property values.

If we look on fire in the mass, we will come close to gaining some idea of the unnecessary menace it is. Billions of dollars have been spent in seeking to prevent it—and while these efforts have borne good fruit, public indifference has prevented the success that should be achieved. It is time for a "Fire Prevention Year."

IS THERE ENOUGH
LIGHT in your home?

YOU can make a distinct change in the appearance and comfortable livableness of your home by giving a little attention to lighting. Usually that is all that is needed, attention and thought given to proper lighting in the same measure as thought and attention is given to color schemes, furniture selection and arrangement. Proper lighting is not costly to attain if it is carefully planned for comfortable and convenient use.

Study the illustration above. It shows a common fault with lighting that may be noticed in many homes, and perhaps your home. Here is a lamp placed beside a corner of a davenport because the furniture arrangement placed a table there. The result is a limited spread of light. Proper lighting would make the entire davenport a comfortable and pleasant place in which to read or work without squinting or eyestrain.

Poor light induces eyestrain and may cause permanent harm to vision. It is also responsible for headaches, weariness, depressed feeling and nervousness.

And it costs so little to light up for cheerfulness, for comfort, for adding to the attractiveness of your home. Lamps and electricity are lower in price today than ever before. They are so inexpensive that every home should have all the light needed for comfort, health and safety.

SEEKS DAMAGES AS RESULT OF ACCIDENT

Mrs. Mary Andre, 70-year-old Colma resident, through her guardian, J. S. Barrett, has brought suit against the William S. Romano Realy Company and John S. Roper, an employe, demanding damages of $53,000 for injuries allegedly sustained in an autombile accident at Colma on April 19. Mrs. Andre is a sister of Mrs. J. T. Casey, wife of the late supervisor, and makes her home with Mrs. Casey. In April she was returning from a theater and had just alighted from a street car at a safety station in Colma when she was struck by an automobile driven by Roper. At the same time Roper's car struck Jerome Franco, also of Colma, causing injuries that resulted in death twenty-four hours later.

Constable S. A. Landini of Colma witnessed the accident, he standing only twenty feet away at the time. He took Roper and the injured man and woman to the Villa Sanitorium, where Roper was pronounced intoxicated. Landini said that Roper, traveling south, crashed through the safety station on which Mrs. Andre and Franco were standing. Roper was jailed on a charge of driving while intoxicated. The charge was changed to manslaughter when Franco died. Mrs. Andre, according to the hospital, sustained a fracture of the skull, a compound fracture of the left leg and other injuries.

BRISBANE TIRES OF UTILITY DISTRICT

Residents of Brisbane appeared before the San Mateo county board of supervisors last Monday and asked the utility district in that section be abandoned.

Their request came only a few hours after an act of the legislature allowing the dissolution of utility districts was signed by the governor.

In their request for the dissolution of the district the one hundred and fifty residents who signed the petition alleged that the district had been organized for two years, and has provided no benefits at all. They alleged further that the utility directors had expended more than $1,000, most of which has been for organization.

FACTS ABOUT THE TELEPHONE

Sammy Boy, a dog owned by Gordon S. Davidson, of Los Angeles, has a listing in the local telephone directory.

In the last six months of 1932, there was a net growth of 31,773 telephone subscribers in France, of whom 5,543 were located in Paris.

A telephone circuit is now in process of construction to the National Park Rest House on Mouna Loa, the highest peak in Hawaii. This mountain is 13,000 feet high, and telephone service is desired as a ready means of communicating any activity of the volcano Kilauea.

When Leslie Makin and Miss Elsie Marshall, of Liverpool, were arraigned for fighting on the street, the court sentenced them to be married at once.

SYNOPSIS

With his yacht, the Intrepid, abandoned by its crew, Felix Horton, millionaire, with his mother, his daughter Nan, and Roy Stuart, puts into Squaw Harbor, Alaska, to recruit. He engages a bunch of nondescripts stranded there. A gigantic Pole, Sandomar, is their leader. Captain Waymire, the Intrepid's skipper, is an old friend of Eric Ericssen, unemployed sailor, and Eric engages to sail as chief officer. Nan and Eric indulge in a moonlight flirtation. The Intrepid is wrecked, Eric leaving her in a small boat, with Horton and his party. Unable to help, they watch Sandomar kill Captain Waymire and leave the ship with his crowd. On landing, they learn there is no communication with the outside world. Fireheart, priestess of the island, descended from a white man in the remote past, knowing a little English, welcomes the castaways. Sandomar declares there shall be no law on the island, but Eric, having the only gun, cows him for the time, declaring he is the law. He lays out work for all. Eric's love for Nan swells, and he tells her he means to win her for his mate. She is not unwilling. Fireheart claims Eric, and realizing the importance of her friendship he is forced to temporize. Defending himself from attack, Eric's revolver apparently misfires, but his assailants flee. Eric finds the revolver, which had been Waymire's, is rim-fire, while five of its six cartridges are center-fire. Eric has one effective cartridge. "Swede," makes an attempt on his life. He uses his one cartridge, killing "Swede," but is left defenseless, though master of the situation, since he alone knows his gun is useless. Fireheart's threats culminate in an attempt on Nan's life. Eric saves her, but Fireheart refuses proffered forgiveness and friendship.

For Nan, this was the beginning of revelation. She was swept into a primal drama that rent her heart. In the gloom of the turf-house, Chigum kept her rendezvous with the Eternal. Save for a crippled ancient, Chigum's father, the two women were alone.

The daylight began to fail. The old Aleut lighted the stone lamps, but he knew no way to help, and he did not understand Nan's frantic pleas to summon Mother Horton. Apparently the two women must fight it through unaided—when Nan tried to break free and seek aid, the cold hand locked fast on her own.

Presently the door flew open, someone crouched to enter, and a tall figure took the lamplight. A dry choking cry broke from her tense throat. Perhaps this was just thankfulness that help had come; but she was swept by some stranger, deeper emotion—a kind of exultation, a sure sense of fulfilment—when she saw Eric's face in the gleam. . . . Sane, cool-headed Marie would be useful here—wise Mother Horton a tower of strength—but Eric was best of all.

Victory was certain, now. Chigum would come up from the valley. Eric and Nan would be doctor and nurse. What teammates they were, comrades in arms! Eric took in the situation with one sweep of his resolute eyes. Wheeling to the old native, he gave an order in sign language and a few words of Aleut. The old man hobbled out; Eric bent over the squaw.

"She's all right, I think," he said. "If she can just last out a few minutes more—"

He spoke to her in kindly, encouraging tones. There was not the least horror for him or for Nan, nor the slightest shame. It was Mother Earth who gave according to her ancient wisdom, teaching a lesson almost too poignant for mortal heart.

While Eric was tossing the little brown newcomer in the air, Mother Horton burst in with dim eyes glittering. But the fight was won. The mother lay gasping, well out of the shadow, and with fair luck and a few hours' rest could return to the drying racks. And the first sound to meet Mother Horton's eager old ears was a thin wail in the silence.

When three of the older squaws trooped over to help with the nursing, Eric noticed a strange thing. When they even looked at the infant, Chigum's eyes grew wide with dread; and when they bent to take the baby from her arms, she snatched it close with a moan.

"What's frightened her so?" Nan demanded. "She's like a wild animal—"

"I don't know, but I can guess," Eric answered. He listened briefly to what seemed a pitiful plea bubbling up from Chigum's trembling lips, then sent for his interpreter.

When Chechaquo came, he soon made the situation clear. "Chigum, she afraid squaws will take baby out on beach, give him to wind," he explained casually. "Too many people on island. Too many mouths, not enough meat. Squaws do this long time when too many babies born."

Nan went white with indignation. "Chechaquo, tell those women that if they touch one hair of that baby's head, Eric will kill them." Her eyes fairly blazed. "If he doesn't, I will! Explain to him, Eric," she begged. "You won't let them carry out that horrible custom!"

"No, but you mustn't blame them too much. It's the only way they know to keep down the island population—not uncommon in the North. After the first day, the baby would be perfectly safe. They'd starve themselves to keep it fat, make any sacrifice for it short of defying some of their heathen gods and taboos. You know how kind they are to children."

"You say—no let baby die?" Chechaquo asked.

"Tell them that the baby must live. There will be plenty of meat for all. If anyone harms the baby, he'll be harmed the same."

Chechaquo translated the command amid a poignant silence. The squaws nodded, glad to be spared the grim office, but the old Aleut rose from his corner, hobbled into the lamplight, and spoke in tremulous, excited tones.

"He say, if baby live, whole tribe have bad luck," Chechaquo interpreted. "When one too many born, one have to die. Old gods say so, long time ago; if people no obey, old gods get mighty mad, raise h—l, birds no fly, fish no run."

"Tell him that the old gods are dead," Eric answered gravely. "I will take all the bad luck on my head. Tell him straight that the baby is not to be harmed. It is the New Law. And not to be afraid—the God of ikon and the candlestick rules the island now, and forbids the killing of children."

When the patriarch heard, he nodded and returned to his corner. Nan thought she saw a dull glow steal into his deep-set eyes.

After their belated supper by the beach-fire, Eric and Nan turned again toward Chigum's turf-hut. "I don't en-

"I Am Not Asleep—I Am Not Dead—I Am Alive."

tirely trust those squaws and maybe not the old man, either," Nan said. "Anyway, I want to see if she's comfortable."

They walked leisurely at first, but before they reached the door they were almost running. But the scene by the flickering oil lamp soon relieved their fears. Chigum lay with her baby at her breast, her broad face radiant, her long eyes darkly lustrous, her coarse lips curled in a wistful half-smile. Eric bent over her a full minute before he chanced to see that the old Aleut was no longer in his corner.

"Where is Anulga (Cormorant)?"

Chigum shook her head with a fateful air. Her eyes moved furtively in their almond slits. Suddenly Eric and Nan found themselves erect, each reading the truth in the other's blanching face.

"You don't think—" Nan began.

"I know it. Life must pay for life, those were his last words. Who can understand these people! I'll get Chechaquo—we might save him yet."

Eric sprinted from the room, and Nan heard him shout as he ran up the village row. Chechaquo, jerked out of his fur-bed, was at first evasive, and only when Eric clutched his shoulder with iron fingers, did he stutter out the truth. The old gods must be propitiated. It was the ancient law of the island, laid down by Tanaga, the first man who came from heaven, that life must pay for life. White Chief did not permit Chigum's baby to be given to the winds, so Anulgo took its place. Otherwise birds would not fly, nor salmon run.

"Chechaquo not know. He gone. He leave hut while you eat meat, say goodby to old men, go away to big cliff across island. You no catch him. He make medicine to gods, jump in sea by now."

"He couldn't have reached there already. Put on your mukluks and come with me. We may catch him yet."

But Chechaquo's jaw set, and he stood like a stone. "I no go. White Chief beat me—kill me—I no go! Heap bad luck."

There was no time to waste, so Eric sped back to Chigum's hut. "I'm going to try to catch him," he told Nan. "It's a long, dark trek, and you'd better stay here."

"I'm going too. I won't slow you up—and I'm afraid to stay alone."

A moment later they were striding across the moors. Nan seemed fired by the flint of his will: nothing mattered in the world but to arrive in time. Her little feet flew. Pitfall and stony mantrap in the grass streaked impotently behind. With Eric she felt a kinship, a kind of unity of soul, that was at once solemn and exultant.

At last they saw the cliff in grim silhouette against the moonlit sea. On its crest was a minute black form—it might be no more than an odd-shaped stone. As they hurried nigh it grew incredibly in stature. It was Anulga, rising from his knees to lift both arms in supplication to the gods of the winds. Between the gusts, they heard him chanting in a thin, wavering voice.

There was no hope of seizing him unawares. He stood on the very summit, an immense granite crag whose hoary brow overhung the sea. It seemed best to advance silently until they could speak to him in quiet tones, then somehow distract his attention from his sacrificial rite until they could steal nearer and take his hand.

"I am not asleep—I am not dead—I am alive," they heard him chant. Then there followed an earnest invocation Eric could not translate; no doubt an entreaty to the old gods of the wind and sea, the spirits that made the birds fly and the salmon run, to take this humble failing life of his in the stead of the new-given life denied them today.

The two intruders had now crept to the base of the rock on which the patriarch stood. "Anulga," Eric called quietly.

His chanting stopped in the middle of a note. He grunted an inquiry.

Eric thanked his stars for his few Aleut words and idioms. "Stay where you are. We would make parley."

The reply was an excited outburst at the top of the thin voice. There was a kind of tragic dignity in his sweeping gestures and erect white head; the moonlight showed his eye-sockets like black fissures in his drawn face.

"Go on up slowly," Eric muttered to Nan. "It's our only hope now. Maybe I can keep him talking till we get our hands on him."

But Anulga's spirit was already running to meet his gods. Stronger hands than Eric's seemed to clasp his own. As the two palefaces peered over the rim, he backed toward the void.

Nan's heart was suffocating, so she clung to the ledge, but Eric sprang for the crest. She saw him risk his own neck as he wrenched over the rim, his hand snatching for Anulga's parka.

He was too late. "Kou-yudam Agougou!" the old man wailed, invoking his heathen gods. "Achidan Agougou!" Then, with a triumphant shout that echoed and trembled among the crags, he sprang into the sea.

Dark water leaped high and drifted down in a nebulous cloud. Eric stood peering over the brink; everything went black before Nan's eyes as she expected him to attempt a rescue. But it would only be suicide—and the old island gods had their due already.

"Poor old chap," he murmured. Then he turned back, and reaching a hand to Nan, drew her up beside him.

Long moments passed before they remembered words. They listened to the sullen roar of the surf, the long splashings of the waves against the rock; they watched the shimmering path of the moon across the sea. . . . They were infinitely alone. It was as though they were the only living things on a far planet, the first of mankind to draw breath in some forlorn, lost universe, God-forgotten through the eons.

"I'm almost glad we didn't win," Eric whispered at last.

The hushed sound did not break the solitude, but harmonized with the swish of the surf and the wind's breath. "I thought you'd come to that, before long," Nan answered.

"You saw it from the first, didn't you? Your sensibilities are far finer than mine—I could see only my own side. Anulga's time was almost up, anyway. Next winter would probably finish him, slow decay, at last a rattle in his throat, and his old bones thrust in the sea-caves. As it is, he went with Agougou's hand on his shoulder, and the flush of glory on his face."

"Better than that. He died for his tribe—a hero's death. It was an illusion, of course, but a fool's faith is better than no faith at all . . . I didn't use to understand that, but I do now."

Eric gazed far off. "And a fool's love—is better than no love at all, isn't it?"

Something in his tone made her throat catch. In the weird moonbeams, his eyes shone like glass.

He reached for her hand. His touch seemed to complete an electric circuit. His head bent, and she saw his hair blowing in the wind as he slowly, gently kissed her fingers.

It was a token of surrender, his second tonight. A few minutes before he had bowed down to the stern destiny that exacted an old man's life in payment for a moment's exultation of his soul. Now he bent his head again—to his own hard-bargaining fate as it moved through Nan. He would no longer haggle over the price. He would risk all, give all, for one deep breath of mountain air, one rocket-rush to the stars.

Once he had said that he was afraid to sail the strait, but that fear had passed. If his ship struck the rocks and went down, at least he would see the distant gleam of the harbor lights.

"I've tried to deny it until now," he said gravely. "I was afraid I could never win you, so I didn't dare love you. I knew how it would be with me—you did too. If it once took hold of me, it would never let me go. It would follow me always."

Nan smiled dimly. This was so. Steadfastness, loyalty, unfaltering idealism were the watch-cries of this strong man's life; racially and individually they were his backbone. His mother was the old sea, his father the new North. To one woman only could he surrender, and to her he must give everything.

"Now I've got to love you, whether I win you or not," he went on. "You've made me, with your beauty—and your bravery—and just you."

Chic Hairdress a Necessary Luxury

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AS YOUNG-LOOKING, as smart-looking, as good-looking as your "permanent" is a beauty secret which is no longer a beauty secret, for we are all discovering for ourselves how greatly are our charms enhanced via a perfect hairdress.

You are expected to put yourself in the hands of beauty specialists these days who study your features with a view to giving you a hairdress which will make you good-looking even if you are homely. They can do it, too!

Perhaps you have heard about the new machineless permanent wave. It is proving nothing less than a sensation in the realm of beauty culture. It is so simply and comfortably done as to be almost unbelievable. A clean odorless vapor takes the place of electric current. The entire procedure is that simple one can actually walk around or play the piano while getting one's permanent wave.

As to this matter of playing up to individual type in dressing the hair we feel that the illustrations herewith are particularly well-chosen to demonstrate that point. What a difference! These lovely, flattering, delightsomely comfortable coiffures as compared to the burdensome hairpin-laden long tresses of yore. Nowadays instead of scraggly necklines and unsightly "scolding locks," law and order and beauty prevail. Then, too, if your particular type of beauty calls, perhaps, for a little soft curl here and there to lessen the suggestion of over-high cheekbones or, mayhap, a clever exposure of a well-shaped earlobe might "turn the trick"—whatever the accent required the trained hair dresser is alert to the fact which is happily assuring as to this matter of playing up one's own individuality.

If you are very, very young and without a furrow on your brow the brushed-back-from-the-forehead hairdress and "bob" shown in two views at the top of this group is for you. Note the fetching softly curled lock over the temple.

Just to convince you that older women are in on all the beauty secrets and that they are not forgotten in the scheme of things, we have included in this galaxy of attractive femininity a charming white-haired lady. Hers is a most gracious and inspiring example of the artistry with which one's hairdress may be suited to type. Can't you just fancy to yourself what a lot of compliments she will be receiving as to her lovely wave, when she presides at the next meeting of the woman's club?

We would especially call your attention to the lovely feather-blown wave which is pictured to the right center. Do not get feather-blown confused with windblown, for they are different. The type shown glories in soft wisps of hair which flutter caressingly yet orderly about the features in a manner flattering to most women.

The call of the hour is for masses of ringlets at the nape of the neck. This reigning vogue is aptly illustrated (two views) in the model below.

And now just a word or two more of this beauty discourse—some one has said of the French woman that when she leaves her boudoir she is "finished." So sure is she of herself and her appearance that she finds no need to resort to a lipstick or powder puff in public. We thought that possibly there might be somewhat of a moral to be gleaned from this message for some few of us.

NEW-LENGTH CAPE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

This lovely simple ensemble, which might well be called a Paris classic, comes from the atelier of Lanvin. Its simplicity is its charm. There is a note of embellishment in the soft bow of wide metal ribbon which ties on one shoulder. A handsome dark velvet cape contrasts the exquisite pastel tone of the frock. Velvet capes of this new length are in high favor with the smart Parisienne. Discriminating women take particular delight in choosing them with a view to providing a perfect color accent to their costumes.

NEWEST NECKLINE DIAMOND SHAPED

If you don't want to appear dead on the vine—the fashion vine, that is—you'd better start making your neckline go diamond shaped. We all can wear diamonds of this kind even if we can't claim any set in platinum, and the trick is very simple, after you know how. Schiaparelli's most potent example of this mode is done with curled cire feathers set in a row, pointing down the back, points over the shoulders and pointed in the front where it meets.

Another way of convincing the public that you are "on the team"—fashionably speaking—is not to forget to attach "Angel Wings" to your best coat or jacket. Sometimes the wings are set in from the back of the shoulder and fly forward rather than the reverse.

Down in Front and High in Back, Fall Hat Mode

Down in front and up in back is the rule for fall hats. The high crowns of this summer have compromised with the general masculine protest, and have come half way down to normal—that is, they have come down in front.

High-backed turbans appear to be the order of the day, some of them built up in points and angles, others achieving the high-back effect by means of quills and drapes.

The beret in satin or velvet continues to be the big news of the early fall showings, however, pulled down over the eyes, with slightly more height in back.

Machine Stitching

Never "help" an article through the sewing machine. Let the feeder do its own work. If pulled through, the stitches will be irregular and it usually means broken or bent needles.

How I Broke Into The Movies

Copyright by Hal C. Herman

BY AL JOLSON

I DON'T believe I "broke" in the movies at all. I think I sauntered into them through a front door that was left open by the Warner Brothers.

And there was a "welcome" mat in the hall! At least I did a lot of "looking" before "leaping."

I "looked" into the movies several times during the years that immediately preceded the development of Vitaphone pictures, but I couldn't be convinced that the silent screen was a proper medium for me to use to reach an audience.

Several producers and directors tried to persuade me but I was always dubious. I went so far as to make tests to plan a story, but I was still dubious and finally decided that the silver screen was for me.

I'm still spektical—about silent pictures—but the public has been kind in its approval of, "The Jazz Singer" and "The Singing Fool."

I had resisted some tempting offers to try the silent picture and was on the road with my show "Big Boy" when the suggestion that I make a "singing" picture was first discussed. We were in Denver with the show and before we left there I had thought the proposition over and decided to make the experiment.

Warner Brothers who had just then perfected the Vitaphone and who had approached me with the proposal that

Al Jolson.

I make their first full length talking and singing picture, were notified that I would accept their offer to make one Vitaphone picture. During the rest of the tour of "Big Boy" we planned the story of "The Jazz Singer" and when the road show closed I went to Hollywood for the first tests.

I was not easily won away from my intention to make the legitimate stage the only medium between the public and me but Vitaphone offered me an opportunity I could not resist.

The success of "The Jazz Singer" is motion picture history. It did "break" into the movies with a loud bang, and I found a new and satisfactory way of reaching a vastly increased audience.

Having made the break and having learned that the public approved of the break, it followed naturally that Warner Brothers wanted more pictures and that I was willing to make them.

In a way I have "gone Hollywood." I have a home there and will probably always spend a part of my time and energy making pictures. I looked a long time before I leaped, but once the leap was made into the movies I had no regrets.

Buck Jones Has Played in More Than 300 Features

Buck Jones has been a successful screen star for more than twelve years. After ten years with Fox, he left that organization to produce independently. Three years ago he joined Columbia pictures and today holds the remarkable record of having appeared in more than 200 feature screen plays.

A fan poll conducted a year ago by a national magazine, revealed that Buck Jones was the most popular outdoor screen star in the opinion of the millions of the publication's readers. The rapid development of the Buck Jones Rangers clubs attests to the star's appeal to the youth of America. Some 3,000,000 Rangers are enrolled throughout the country, in these boys' clubs with a goodly portion of them meeting regularly in more than 500 theaters.

BANK SURVEY SHOWS IMPROVED CONDITION

Improved conditions of agriculture and business throughout California are reflected in the trade and crop reports contained in the August issue of the Bank of America Business Review.

The bank's preliminary July index of Far Western business registered 64.2, a gain of 4.2 points over the June figure and an increase of 19.3 per cent over the depression low of 53.8 registered in March.

The gain from June to July is the largest since February 1930. The next largest gain since that date was 3.6, recorded in June of this year over the May showing. The 1933 July index figure is approximately at the level of March, 1932, and is 2.2 points above July 1932.

An increase of 8.1 per cent over July, 1932, and an increase of 7.1 per cent over June, 1933, was shown in the number of persons employed in California manufacturing industries last month, the Review says. The gain over July 1932, is the largest increase over the corresponding month of a preceding year which has been shown in the past twenty-four months.

A survey of July building permits in fifty-eight cities throughout eight far western states showed a 66.7 per cent gain over July 1932. Bank debits for the month in twenty-seven Western cities were 8.4 per cent above the debits in July 1932, the largest percentage gain since October of 1929. Dollar volume of retail sales in July of this year was 12.8 per cent above the July 1932 total, the largest percentage gain since February 1924.

N.R.A. FUNDS IMPROVE NATIONAL FORESTS

Motorists, campers, and other outdoors enthusiasts soon will find important improvements in progress in some of the most popular recreational areas in California—the National Forests. This is indicated by a report received by the California State Automobile Association from the National Forest Service concerning plans for expenditure of $8,500,000 of N. R. A. funds within National Forests of the California region during the next two years. Appropriations received by the Forest Service under the National Industrial Recovery Act are divided into three classes:

$2,978,000 for roads and trails required for the administration, protection, utilization and development of the forests.

$2,660,000 for forests highways which form a part of the United State and Federal-aid highway systems.

$2,871,000 for forest protection and administrative improvements, and special forestry projects.

In addition to road and trail construction and betterment made possible by these appropriations, many other productive forestry activities will be undertaken, according to Regional Forester S. B. Show.

"Among the most important of these activities," Show said, "will be the building of extensive fire breaks, fire lookout observatories, and telephone lines which are needed for the protection of the forests; the improvement of many new public camp grounds for the use of campers and motorists; the construction of ranger and guard stations in the forests; projects for the control of insect infestations and rodents that destroy mountain meadow ranges; stock driveway and range fence construction; erosion control; the improvement of forest waters for fish; and many other similar National Forest activities."

In addition to expenditures for machinery and equipment needed for the work, it is estimated that the appropriations will provide employment amounting to one and a half million man-days of labor, equivalent to the employment of 10,000 men at a substantial wage for periods of 150 days each. All positions, except common labor, will be under civil service and work will be on the basis of a 30-hour week.

Curtailment of Education a Menace to the Nation

In his address before the National Education Association convention on July 6, Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, made a strong appeal for the maintenance of our public school facilities on the highest possible level. He sees the curtailment of school facilities in this country as a menace to the nation, and in simple language states what that menace is. The following are extracts from his address:

"When we have time to stop to think of them, we are proud of our schools, our universities, our libraries and our art galleries. But how few of us have had any real concern for the things of the spirit, for the graces of life?

"We are a practical people. Our outstanding characteristics is acquisitiveness. We are acquisitive because of our urge for power.

"The material things of life have always been the most appealing to us. It has been our theory that wealth covered a multitude of sins, including the sin of ignorance.

"Now there is general evidence that we are facing a real crisis in the education of our people. Doubts as to whether education is achieving what we had expected of it as well as impaired ability to finance our educational institutions on the scale to which they have grown accustomed, are helping to develop a situation and a public temper which may result in a further waste of human resources.

"We are seeing on all sides a willingness—in some cases it has almost seemed like an eager desire—to curtail and limit educational possibilities for this generation. Citizens of a certain type are always willing to begin their economies with the school.

"The most important question requiring an answer today at the hands of the American people is: What are we going to do about our public schools?

"We shall maintain them on such a basis as will give our children an education in those essentials absolutely necessary to equip them as individuals and as citizens to lead such lives as men and women must be equipped to lead in a self-governing republic of free men, or are we going to let them slip back into an era of unenlightenment, bigotry and ignorance?

"Unless as a people we are given a constantly enlarged background of history and the social sciences; unless we know something about government and its operation; unless we are acquainted with contemporaneous national and international events; unless our spirits through education are made as free as possible from prejudice, superstition and bigotry; unless we are trained to be mutually tolerant and understanding of each other, building up within ourselves a will to understand the other man's point of view; unless all of these things and more are offered us, our free institutions which were established that we might be able to live fuller and nobler lives, are in grave danger.

"Except by means of a broad and generous education freely provided by the people for our children as a whole, we cannot hope to have put into the hands of those children essential tools with which to carve out a happy destiny for themselves and for their own children in turn. If at this critical stage we continue to deny educational opportunities to literally millions of our children, our country will suffer when those millions, grown shortly to be uneducated men and women, are called upon to undertake the responsibilities of government.

"Every person in this country should be educated to his fullest possible capacity. If we undertake to build a factory we want to have the best equipment that the genius of the inventors is able to supply.

"The waste in human capacity resulting from our carelessness and indifference with respect to education is amazing. Customarily we have regarded a child as educated if he has passed the eighth grade or if he has a high school diploma, or has graduated from a college, depending more or less upon the social background of the child.

"I do not mean by this that every child should have a college course and perhaps go on for a higher degree. Every child should be given every possible opportunity in the schools to develop his utmost intellectual and spiritual capacity, regardless of where along the long road of education that means that any particular child should stop.

"Capacity for education is our one distinguishing characteristic as members of the animal kingdom. Economy in other directions fo rthe sake of maintaining and improving our educational facilities would only be common sense. Here is the last place where we should economize and the first where we should increase our outlay.

"I know that without a highly educated electorate our system of government cannot be maintained; certainly it cannot be developed and perfected. I know that an intelligent government and an intelligent citizenship do not spontaneously grow. They must be fashioned by carefully fabricated, highly tempered intellectual tools.

"Our chief interest as a government, therefore, is education, and any economy that will cut at the roots of our system of free and universal education, our American system, may prove to be a fatal economy. To be great and noble and free, America must be educated."

Some of the more dignified members came in their lodge uniforms. Children's games were played and refreshments served.

DRUIDS DEFEATED BY LOCAL EAGLES

The Daly City Eagles baseball team easily defeated the Hesperian Druids last Sunday, 13 to 5. Early in the saason these two teams played a 2 to 0 game, with the Eagles on top. It was a revenge game, as the play in the early innings proved. At the end of the third inning the score stood 6 to 5, in favor of the locals.

Sam Hawley started as Eagle pitcher, but gave way to Petrocchi, who allowed but one hit and no runs in six and one-third innings. Some twirling. In the meantime the Eagles went on a batting rampage in the seventh inning to cinch the game. A sensational double play, Petrocchi to Long to Petrocchi, featured Eagles' play in the first inning. The crowd got a thrill in the sixth inning when the shortstop for Druids took a swing at Umpire Buck Anderson, only to have the umps come right back. The two were separated and the game resumed.

This coming Sunday at 2 P. M. the Eagles play at Jefferson high grounds.

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 6 FRIDAY, AUGUST 25, 1933 NUMBER 5

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

Co-operation builds cities. Co-operate with your home merchants. They co-operate for and with you at all times.

Be Patient

Husband: "How long do you suppose I could live without brains?"

Friend Wife: "Time will tell."

When you think of building, think of H. H.

Judge: "What's the charge?"

"Impersonating an officer, your honor. He took a couple of bananas from a fruit stand."

The more patient pedestrians, the fewer pedestrian patients.

She: "A penny for your thoughts, dear."

He: "I was just thinking of leaving."

Dad (up-stairs): "Give him a dollar, Marie. It's worth it."

Teacher: "What would your father pay if he owed the baker $15.35, the butcher $20.63, and the milk man—"

Pupil: "Nothing. He'd move."

Put your money in a Home of your own, and you will have it in the safest Bank in the world—a bank that never fails. If properly insured, your money can not even go up in flames, or be blown away.

Daly City is a fine City. Are you doing your share to beautify it?

He: "Girls are prettier than men."

She: "Naturally."

He: "Artificially."

The Wisest Policy

Daughter: "He says he thinks I'm the nicest girl in town. Shall I ask him to call?"

Mother: 'No, dear, let him keep on thinking so."

Success is a matter of men at methods —not of ime and territory.

Jack: "Dearest, you are the breath of my life."

Opal: "Well, why don't you hold it?"

Invest in a home first. It will pay you big dividends in Health, Wealth, and Happiness.
